REMOTE VIEWING refers to the gathering of information about a distant or unseen target using paranormal means or extra-sensory perception. Typically a remote viewer gives information about an object that is hidden from physical view and separated at some distance. The term was introduced by parapsychologists Russell Targ and Harold Puthoff in 1974.

Remote viewing was popularized in the 1990s, following the declassification of documents related to the Stargate Project, a 20 million dollar research program sponsored by the U.S. Federal Government to determine any potential military application of psychic phenomena.

Russell Targ

Russell Targ is a physicist and author who was a pioneer in the development of the laser and laser applications, and was co-founder of the Stanford Research Institute's investigation into psychic abilities in the 1970's and 1980's for the CIA. This previously classified work, in what is now widely known as remote viewing, was published in Nature, The Proceedings of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers (IEEE), and the Proceedings of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He is co-author of eight books dealing with the scientific investigation of psychic abilities, Buddhism, and a recent autobiography. He currently pursues ESP research in Palo Alto, California, and is also publishing special editions of classic books in psychical research.

In this workshop, Russell Targ, co-founder of the previously SECRET psychic research program:

- will describe the very best evidence for extrasensory perception, precognition, intuitive diagnosis and distant healing including remote data and slides from the SRI program.
- * will explain many of these applications - from psychic spying to successful forecasting of the silver commodity market.
- * will discuss how to recognize the actual psychic signal, and separate it from mental noise of memory, imagination, and analysis - and why should we bother with ESP.
- * will conclude with how this expanded awareness can lead to the discovery of who you really are.

Participants of this workshop will have hands-on lessons in remote viewing with Russell Targ, just as he gave at the Stanford Research Institute.
